REMEMBER WHEN . . .

your lab table exploded.
your best friend was trash canned.
the time you got a green hamburger from the cafeteria.
the dog delivered your term paper.
the Guidance Office was being remodeled.
the wrestling team won the C.I.F. Championship.
ASB sang Christmas carols to us.
your first high school crush.
the teachers performed "South Pacific" for Hi-Jinx.
volleyball won three consecutive League Championships.
everyone was "sick" on the same day the Cheerleaders placed 8th in state championships.
Mr. Brick wore his plaid pants.
smoking was allowed on campus.
you first went to viewpoint.
Mr. Nordquist went to the Olympics and Good Will Games.
we had a C.I.F. golf participant.
the noontime music and activities.
Eyewitness News came to Santa Fe.
the cram sessions before finals.
your first visit to Mr. Cogdill's office.
Mr. Edwards brought his lunchbox.
all night term paper parties.
You received a gram that wasn't signed.
Miss Johnson changed the teachers dress code it was all about scam and jam the gang papered the school. the toads swung from the chandeliers in Mr. Lunt's class.
Your first Varsity game.
the cha-cha's wore aqua-net.
Ms. Van Dyke was seen at Huntington Beach.
the freshman geek that followed you around and now she is gorgeous.
you went to buy an ASB card . . . in the Guidance Office.
there was writing on the bathroom walls.
Pete Retired.
the party got broken up.
you ran home to get the mail before your parents got home.
we had endless lunch meetings.
you wanted to fit in.
you were in driver's training with Mr. Arns.
you asked the cute guy to go to the formal and he said, "Yes!"
hearing the repeat announcements in the bulletin for the fifth time.
Sherrod got the pie in his face.
all the guys got flat tops.
the city had their road "improvements."
fluorescent was in.
we had those candy sales.
we had C.I.F. Track Participants. everybody got there Varsity Jacket for Christmas all the other classes tried to be the best, but the best was, and still is

THE CLASS OF 1987!

WHAT IF . . .

you best friend became a superstar.
high school was seven years you had a 4.0 grade average you were allowed to ditch I moved in the ninth grade we had a spirited school we didn't have I.D.C.
there was no hair spray the teachers went on strike the school became drug-free we didn't have those novels to read.
we never lost a game there weren't those couples in the corner people didn't care what they looked like. the Cosby Show was cancelled there was no jello and puddings there were no deodorants there were no soap operas Mondale had won the '84 elections

A Life Like Mine

Lives which seem so inflicted with pain and sorrow seem so lonely Sitting by myself, just me, with all I own and me as a friend
My companion with who I sit, is just me myself I have no other
I have no care from any other, but my own heart of which has gone through so much and it pounds so slow with faint low beats All I had are no longer with. Death has taken the hope the little I had But yet as I sit and see a blind, my eyes grow weak from the inner pain My back has lost all its strength, the food I ate so long ago must be wearing I feel so weak it's hard to breathe. I can remember so well such fun there used to be A child playing with my friends, friends which I had friends which sort of cared But it was not enough, my mind knew, living off a memory imitations of love
The pain that comes, my tears are running, but I guess that's a part of being alone, with only me as a friend Can I help but to cry, I can't hug me or cheer up myself
The pain has grown, now my breath, my breath is short and breathing causes pain Maybe I'll just stop, breathing that is, it hurts too much anyways breath is no more Not just that I want is gone, but now I can't, as if my lungs were gone no air is coming in It feels so strange not able to breathe, like when you're under water holding your breath and you need air You shoot to the top, fast as you can, get some air, and you get there breathing so violently, but I can't, I'm not at the top Things are unclear, a mist is present, but now my pain, the deathly pain it is gone
I feel as though I have oxygen all around me but I don't need it I have no need of breathing
It seems oxygen is present without breathing, my body is free of pain and through the mist my eyes capture a wonderful sight
The ones I love or that loved me, I see my mother, my father I run with a hope, that care is there They lead me down a street I have not seen, a white house with flowers it is our house
Not the same one we had before, a new one, children are playing but I don't recognize them Now looking down upon myself, I must be only six, maybe seven My mother tells me to go meet the neighbor kids I walk up to them, they look unfamiliar, they ask my name we start to play
It feels so good to have friends again, one of the children asks me
If I would be his best friend A best friend such a change from before, but all the pain and loneliness is still in my mind, unforgotten But not love is present do cure it, and life is fun again me and my friends, together again Now we play ball, I'm in the field, ball was always such fun the hit goes over my head I chase the ball and it goes in the street, I run and get it a car is coming, very fast I can't get out of the way, no time, that terrible pain, it's back it hurts, all is dark again, but now I can't find the mist I'm all alone.

THE WAY WE WERE

The week of September 29th was Homecoming week at Santa Fe High School. ASB sponsored the annual spirit week, class competitions, pep rallies, and Homecoming assembly. Monday we all wore our Mickey Mouse shirts and brought our cameras for Tourist Day. Santa Fe went Greek on Tuesday with Toga Day. The dress code was changed to allow sheets and ivy. Wednesday was color day. Seniors wore white, Juniors in blue, Sophomores in pink, and Freshmen stood out in red. On Thursday we mourned the hopeful fall of the Titans with Funeral Day. That night ASB had a Pep rally at Santa Fe Springs Town Center Hall. Pep Club sold refreshments, the cheerleaders, band and drill team performed. Friday was CHIEF Day! The entire day was filled with many activities. The ASB started it off right by selling Homecoming balloons and ribbons. The cheerleaders added spirit by saluting the football players with their very own Hall of Fame. The football players made their mark by adopting a code of silence. The 1986 Homecoming Court took pictures at Penn Park, and then it was off to the assembly! The ensemble, band, drill team, tall flags, and cheerleaders were at their best. The Student League sponsored the reception that was held after the Homecoming Assembly. This gave the Homecoming Court a chance to relax and the alumni time to mingle. The football game against Pioneer made the day complete. The final score was Santa Fe 13, Pioneer 26. The Chiefs played in front of one of the largest crowds in several years. All were there to see the crowning of Queen Emily Villavicencio.

What Success Is At Santa Fe High

Success is speaking words of praise

Pride is speaking words with honor

In cheering our team's ways

In doing just the very best we can

It is silence and excitement when our words are heard

It is deafness when teachers speak and sympathy when students don't

It is loyalty when things must be done

It is courage when all fails

It is patience when the school days are long

It is found in our Alma Mater song

It is responsibility when we feel blue

It is in the silent time of test

It is happiness and sadness

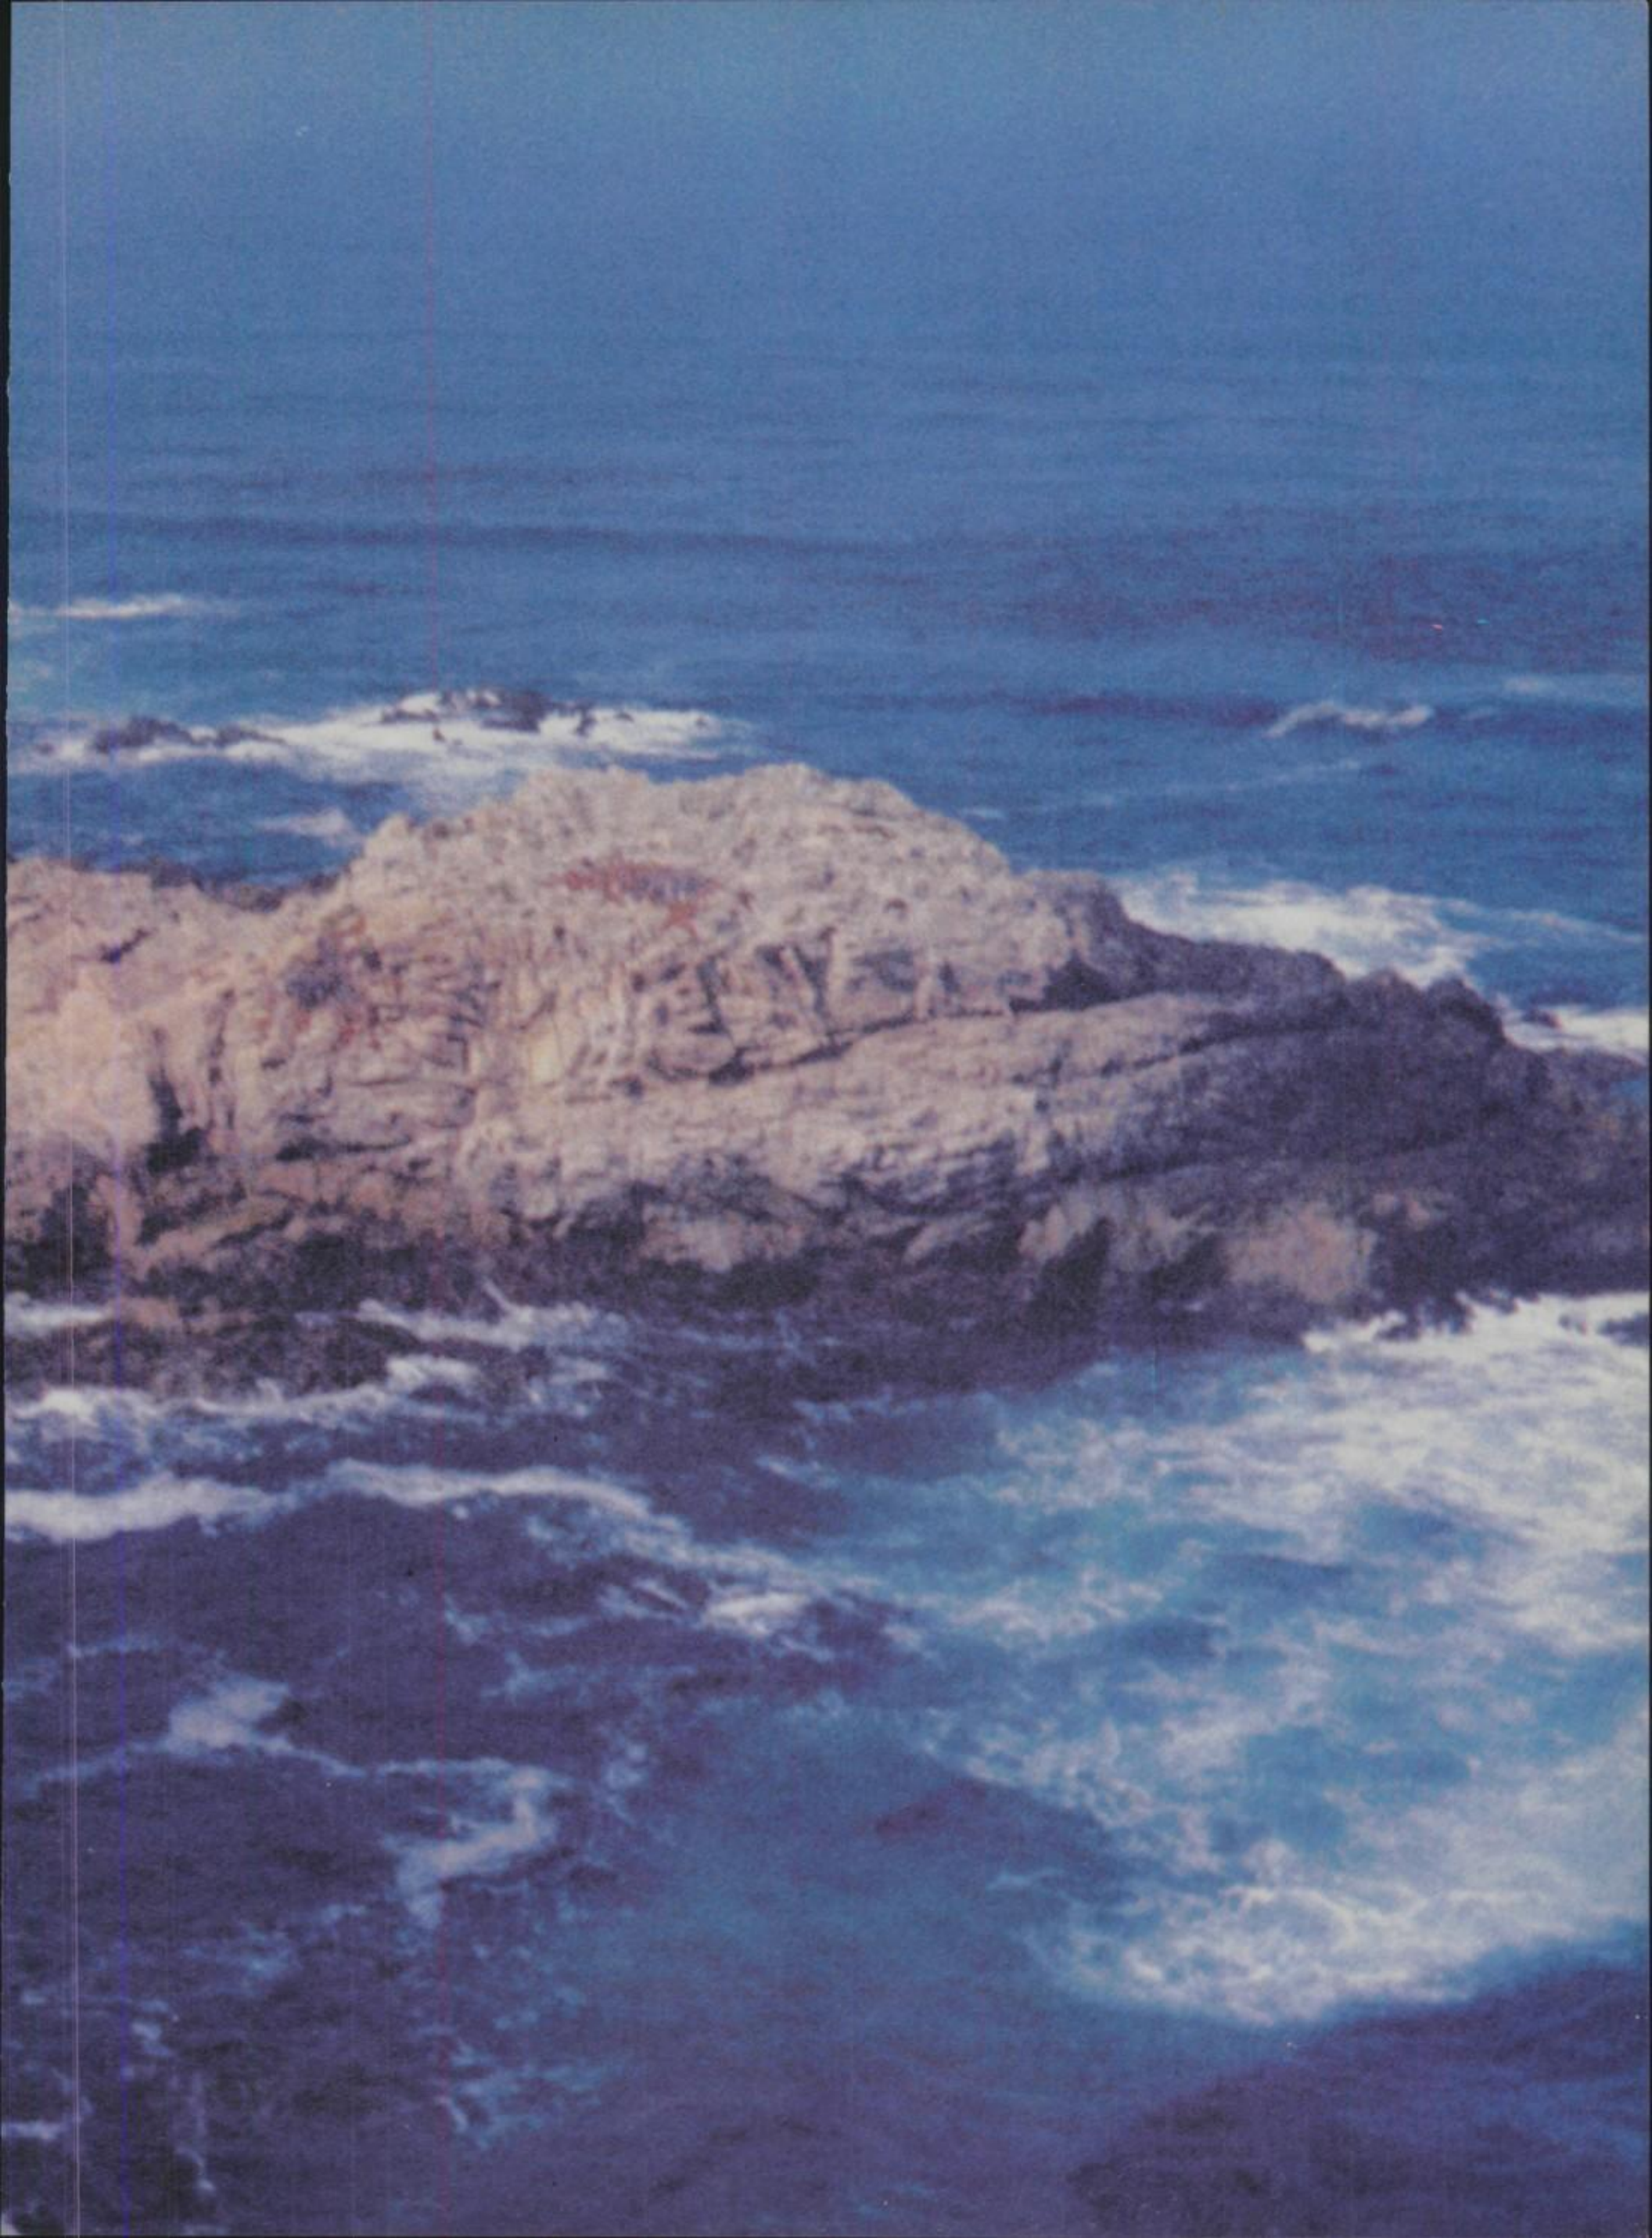

It is life at Santa Fe High

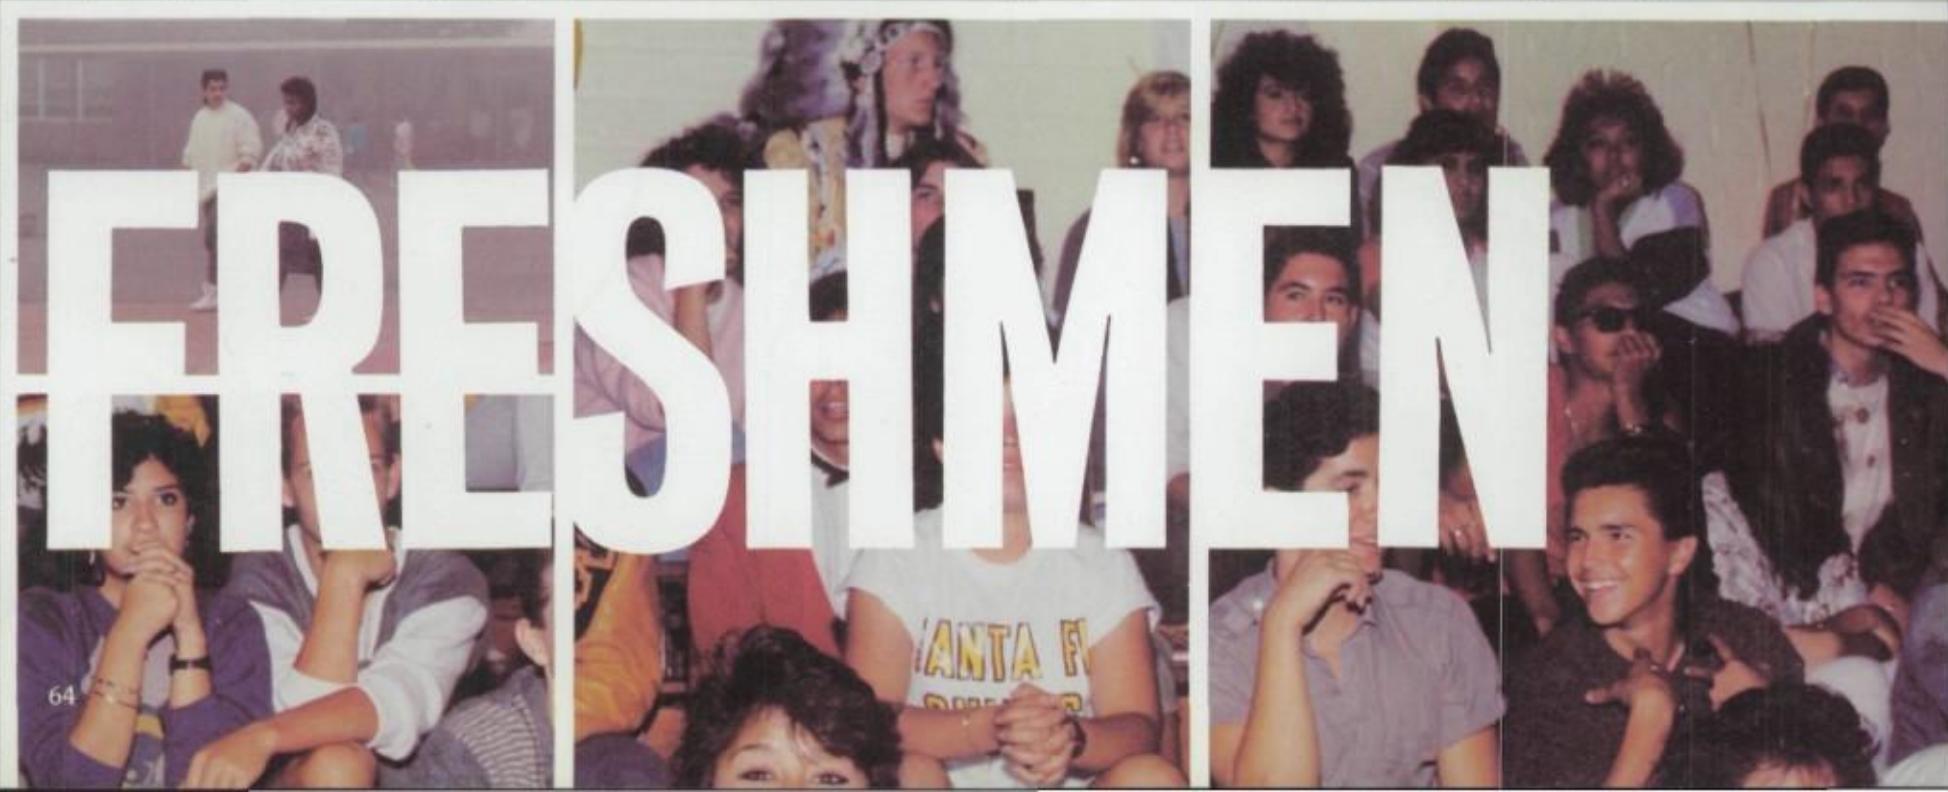

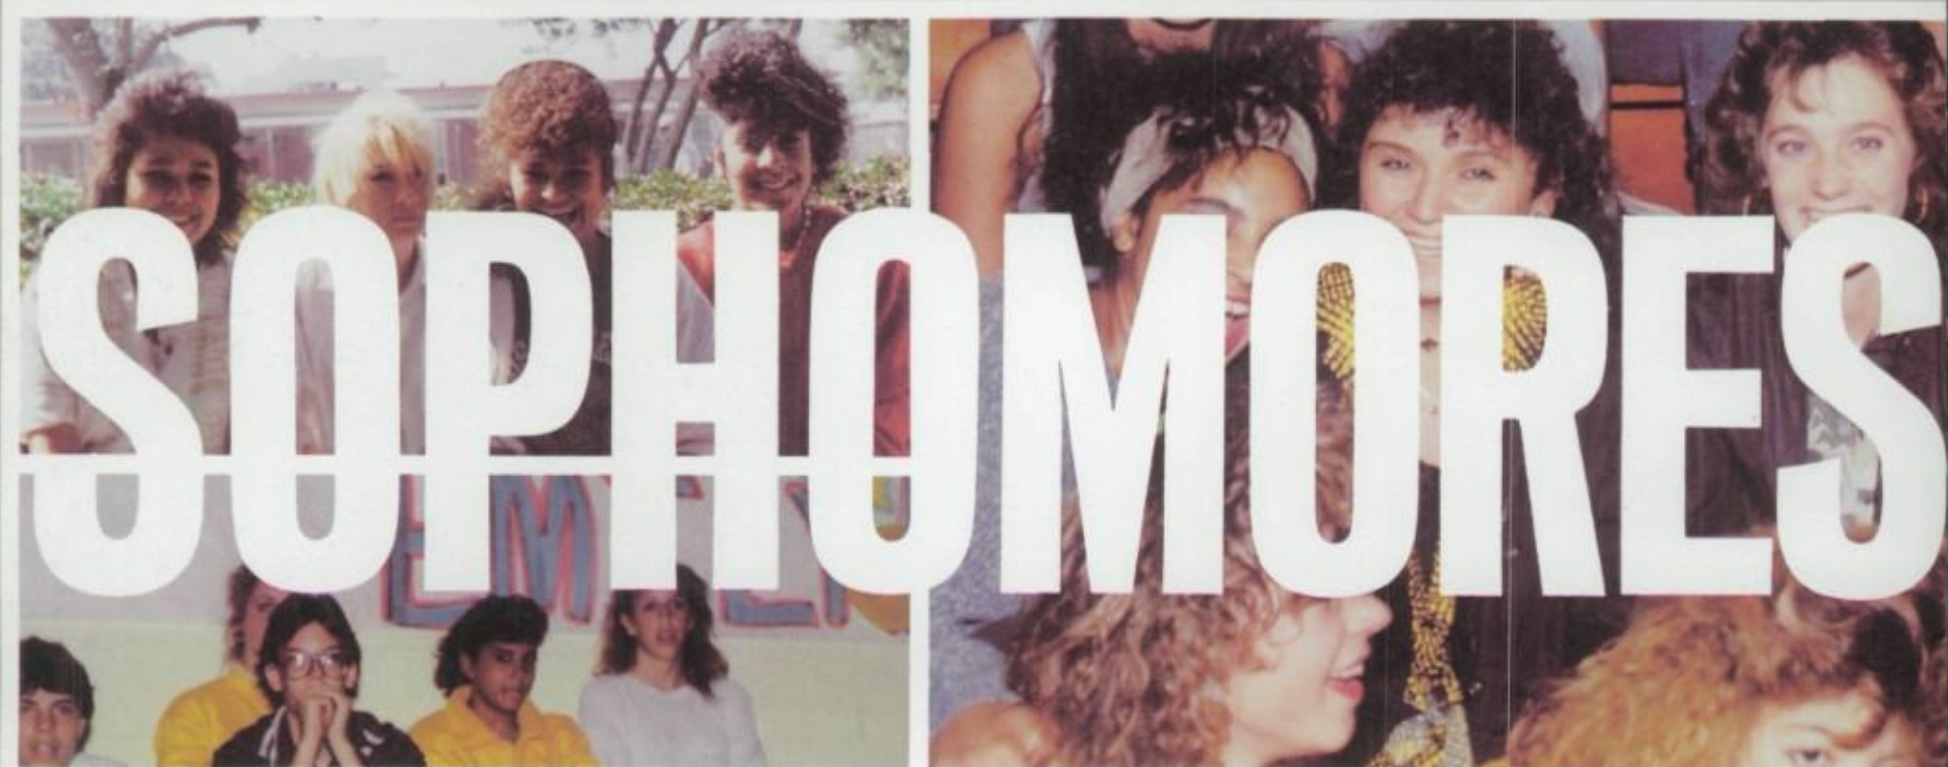

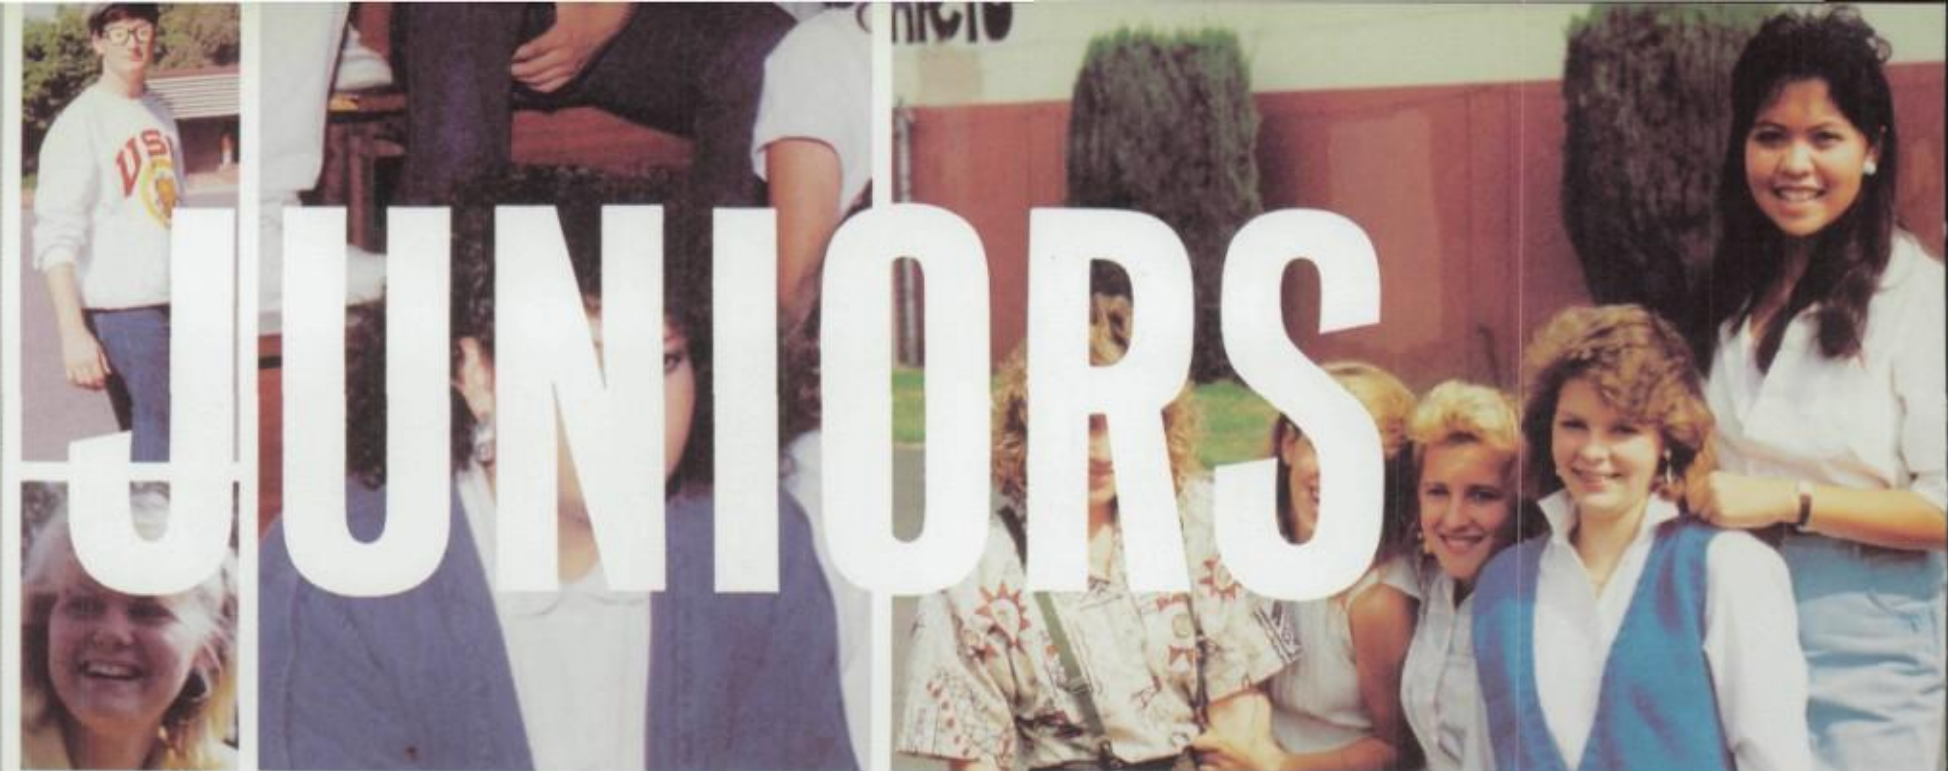

It is not expecting excellence but appreciating its achievements

It is laughter at one's own mistakes

In all Success Is Pride At Santa Fe High!

1986-87 has been an achievement for Santa Fe High School. Your school won exemplary status in six separate programs; that translates into outstanding team effort and individuals achievements. It is always difficult to leave a well-lighted room to step out on a dark and unknown road. Team effort and individual achievement will light your way; Success is Pride.

They Have Seen It All

We have five remarkable teachers who have seen the graduation of every senior class at Santa Fe High. These men have given us their long lasting dedication and service. Mr. Jadwin, Mr. Jordan, Mr. Marcus, Mr. Reid, and Mr. Walsh have worked at Santa Fe for at least thirty years. The 30th graduating class would like to take this opportunity to thank you for your outstanding efforts and accomplishments!

BE NOT ALWAYS

Fragile thoughts from wrinkled lips produce hoarse sounds but wise old tips Shaky hands cracked with pain point the way to futures lane Roads which lead of course with stress to a street we call success But our ears close so quick when we see gray hair is thick Words are spoke but not heard hearts are broke but not cured But you will learn soon one day You'll be the one kids castaway A feeling that you have not known being surrounded yet all alone

ME AND YOU

I was sort of scared but you led the way You took my hand and took me away
You showed me a feeling I'd never seen The love I thought was only in a dream
From a sweet kiss and a warm embrace I saw the beauty flow in your face
As our lips touched and I held you tight Everything seemed to fit just right
When I looked into your eyes all I could do was stare
The beauty and love was all there This is how I saw it and I thought it might last But now it is a matter of present past Maybe we'll get together another day
But that time will always be a lifetime away
I could make up a story or tell a lie But I'll always care and that I will not deny I really think that when a relationship begins to start
That there will always be love in that heart
It shows as a laugh or as a tear It shows when I see you or when you're near We experienced something I'd never been through We took it slow and you were always true
I guess you were like an angel who gave me a shove
You put me in the real world and showed me love I'm grateful even though some of our love is lost
But I guess in life everything has to cost

IT'S CALLED LIFE

For every laugh there is a tear and for every known there is a fear For every dream there is a nightmare and for every worry there is a care For every bad there is a good and for every do there is a would For every defeat there is a try and for every truth there is a lie I wish I hadn't but then I wish I had I wish I was happy but then I wish I was sad
If you had one wish you would wish for two
If you had a red shirt you would want a blue People always want more and that's the way it seems to be They're never happy unless they have a guarantee There's no guarantee in life and they shall soon find out That you can't get everything with just a pout Life is strange but so is man
He thinks he can get anything by holding out his hand Man was not put here to receive and to get He was put here to work and improve and that's something he seems to regret

CRY MY FRIEND

Cry my friend into my arm
Cry those tears that bring you harm Put your head upon my shoulder And let me be a friendship holder Let me hug those tears away
And make your pain go a-stray Let me show you that I care And if you need I'll be there Now my friend let out those tears
Let out the hurt destroy the fears Let the drops fall and fall Liquid pain cry them all Make sure all the tears are through Just don't worry I'm here for you
Cry my friend into my arm
You know I'll never bring you harm

SHANE VARNUM

A REAL FRIEND IS ALSO

A real friend is also someone who is there to dry up your tears with their own care To make sacrifices of things they must do to cancel other appointments to be there with you When you really need them and your pain has grown and it's too much to handle, on your own When that special someone has ended that special love and you feel like going to the heavens above When life is at its worst and pain has hit a high and you need a friend to help stop your cry And when your tears are gone your friend still holds you near as you look into their eyes and see your own tear For when you feel pain your friends do too your feelings are connected with the love in both of you A friend hugging a friend some people can't see friends that cry for each other, that's not for me That is what they say their minds just won't bend
 But that's the only way to earn a real friend And sometimes you can hear their lonely voices tone with no one to hug crying all alone

SHANE VARNUM

THERE'S MEET

A SALUTE TO THE SANTA FE CHIEFS

Let's give a salute to the chiefs Who didn't win this year.
The fellows gave it all they had
And deserve a rousing cheer.
The boys were in there fighting During every single game;
They tried to score those touchdowns,
But the victories never came.
Linemen, backs, and ends Receivers — and the rest, Although they didn't seem to click,
They always did their best.
It's just that busy lady luck Forgot our team this fall.
She walked right out on Santa Fe Each time they took the ball.
So as the season closes, Let's give a great big cheer
For Santa Fe's fighting football team Who tried so hard this year.

Michael R. Livoti
Class of '87

Your infectious grin
My fleeting glance
Our accidental meetings
Not really by chance

A knowing smile
A warm embrace
That loving touch
That makes my heart race

Your hand about mine
At the end of the day
When you leave me
Do you ever go astray

Are your feelings the same Am I in command
Or do you hold my future
In the palm of your hand

Will we ever know How it all began
And now that it's over
Can I ever live again

In Memory

Chief volleyball team upends Lancers in five

By MIKE HOLLER
Sports Writer

It may not have been a CIF-SS playoff encounter, but Wednesday's Whitmont League showdown between La Serna and Santa Fe High's had all the trimmings.

Drama — La Serna entered the match at 10-0 while Santa Fe, the defending league champs, were 9-1 with their only loss coming at the hands of — you guessed it — La Serna.

Suspense — A La Serna win would have wrapped up the league title while a Santa Fe victory would give the Chiefs a tie with the Lancers and the upper hand entering post season play.

VOLLEYBALL

Tension — Both coaches, La Serna's Brian Hosfeld and Santa Fe's Sandi Curtis, are first-year coaches who have been immediately thrust into the midst of a league race.

Intrigue — Hosfeld geared his club's game plan to stopping one player while Curtis stressed consistency and team play.

The match lived up to its billing.

In the end, however, it was the defending league champs, behind returning league Co-MVP Cathy Robles, who held on for an exciting 15-9, 14-16, 10-15, 15-6 and 15-3 win.

In the Whitmont League, if a first-place tie occurs, the team that won the second-round match — in this case Santa Fe — would represent the league as the No. 1 team.

With three league matches remaining, Santa Fe (10-1), barring a collapse, will be the league's top seed while La Serna (10-1) will go as the second seed.

"I'm really happy with the way we played," Hosfeld said. "Both teams played out of their minds. Santa Fe dug some balls and had some saves that you don't think would come back. It was an exciting match."

Curtis: "I told them before the match that we can't give up in the middle — that we just had to push ourselves and they did it."

Santa Fe won the first game before La Serna bounced back to win Games 2 and 3.

In Game 4, Santa Fe bolted to a 12-1 lead, struggled, then hung on for the 15-6 win setting the stage for Game 5.

Before the final game, Robles, an All-CIF performer last season, called the Chiefs together for an impromptu pep talk.

"I just told them, 'this is it,'" Robles explained. "If we want to keep our intensity level up, we have to go for every point. We had to make every play count."

Curtis didn't even speak to her troops before Game 5. She didn't have to.

"I didn't talk to 'em," Curtis admitted. "But Cathy said the things I would have said. Cathy just stepped in and the girls responded real well."

Indeed. The Chiefs, behind Robles, Helen Myung, Margaret Varoz and Celena Garcia, vaulted to a 7-0 lead, prompting Hosfeld to call time.

"I told them we needed to pass and communicate better. No pass — no play."

Were the Lancers feeling the heat?

"Yes they were feeling the pressure," Hosfeld said. "You could see it on their faces."

The Chiefs built a 13-3 edge to set the stage for Robles.

Appropriately, the 5-foot-9 senior scored the game's final two points. Point 14 was a smashing kill and No. 15 was a dink over two Lancer blockers.

"She is a leader," Curtis said of Robles. "She's normally a strong player both offensively and defensively but she put out a little more effort today."

Hosfeld knew Robles would be the key.

"In preparation, our basic thing was to stop Cathy Robles," he said. "If we could stop her — in a sense — we could win."

Robles wasn't the only Chief that gave La Serna problems.

Varoz, a 5-2 junior, was a kamikaze on the court, diving for loose balls and digging several Lancer smashes that could have resulted in La Serna points.

"Margaret was giving that little extra effort on defense," Curtis said. "That's her specialty and at times it really made a difference."

Endless Beginnings

Exotic dresses, snappy tuxedos, excitement, and romance were all a part of "Endless Beginnings," the theme of this year's Winter Formal. The Student League sponsored the dance on January 17, at Lakewood's Center at Sycamore Plaza. Each couple purchased a ticket for $45. This included dinner, dancing, roses, keychains and frames that had the theme of the formal printed on them. Dinner was served at 8 p.m. and was followed by dancing that ended at midnight. The buffet dinner included enchiladas, chicken, chili rellenos, rice, beans, fresh fruit, and tortillas. The romantic music during dinner and the fast-slow mixes afterwards were by Uranium. Mr. and Mrs. Cooke, Mr. Reid, Mr. and Mrs. Campos, and Ms. Salcido were the chaperones for the evening. All of the couples seemed to have a very nice time. All in all the dance was a memory filled with endless beginnings!

Reflections of the Past, Images of the Future

In 1987 we celebrate the Thirtieth class to graduate from Santa Fe High. It was with this knowledge that this annual was created. Our cover design and feature of some of the faculty members reflect this fact.

The cover this year, as you may have noticed, is quite different from any produced in past years. It was intended to capture your imagination and spark your interest. When you look at it please look not only at the front but also the back and try to see the concept behind it. The cover is a whole picture, with the back as the left side and the front as the right side. The two Indians are supposed to be looking at the same view, from the same window, in different time periods. The older Chief, on the front, trying to imagine the things to come and the younger Chief looking back at how things were.

The theme, or title should be read Reflections of the Past, Images of the Future. It is from our past that we know who we are, where we came from and from the past we can learn our own shortcomings and perhaps discover where we are going. All of us, no doubt, have imagined a highly technological future, a place where luxury, sophistication, and creature comforts are par for the course. It is this utopic future people have dreamt of for ages. Perhaps living, as we do, on the brink of so many astonishing advancements in science, space travel, and medicine makes us believe in this perfect world called the future.

It is this belief that keeps us moving, dreaming and living. Looking back helps give us perspective on the future, and looking forward gives us the hope to pursue our dreams. Reflections of the Past, Images of the Future.

It was in 1974

When we heard the first bell,

We began our long journey

At the sound of it's knell.

At the ringing of the second

We were off once more

On a journey to learn

What the R's stood for.

For knowledge we strived,

And the time went so fast,

That the third through the seventh

Were soon of the past.

From children to teenagers

In three years we grew,

Our activities were many

And our lives seemed like new.

The twelfth bell rang,

But it can never fade

All the happy moments

As juniors we portrayed.

Now, the final bell

Has been rung at last,

Echoing, and reminding us

Of our wonderful past.

Our last year passes

Too quickly to explain

Nine months go by,

And it's June again

Solemn and stately

We walk down the aisle,

Blinded with tears

We try hard to smile.

Our minds are hazy,

In our eyes there's a tear,

As we realize now

We won't be back next year.

The thought brings us shivers

Yet we know it is true,

We glance at our classmates

Thinking of what we've been through.

The fun packed days

We never shall forget,

The final exams

We think of them yet.

To us at the time

They seemed hard to endure,

Reminiscing now,

Oh, how easy they were!

One at a time

We receive our diplomas now,

Like the finale of a drama

We take our final bow.

Realizing it's over,

We try hard to clear

Our minds of the memories

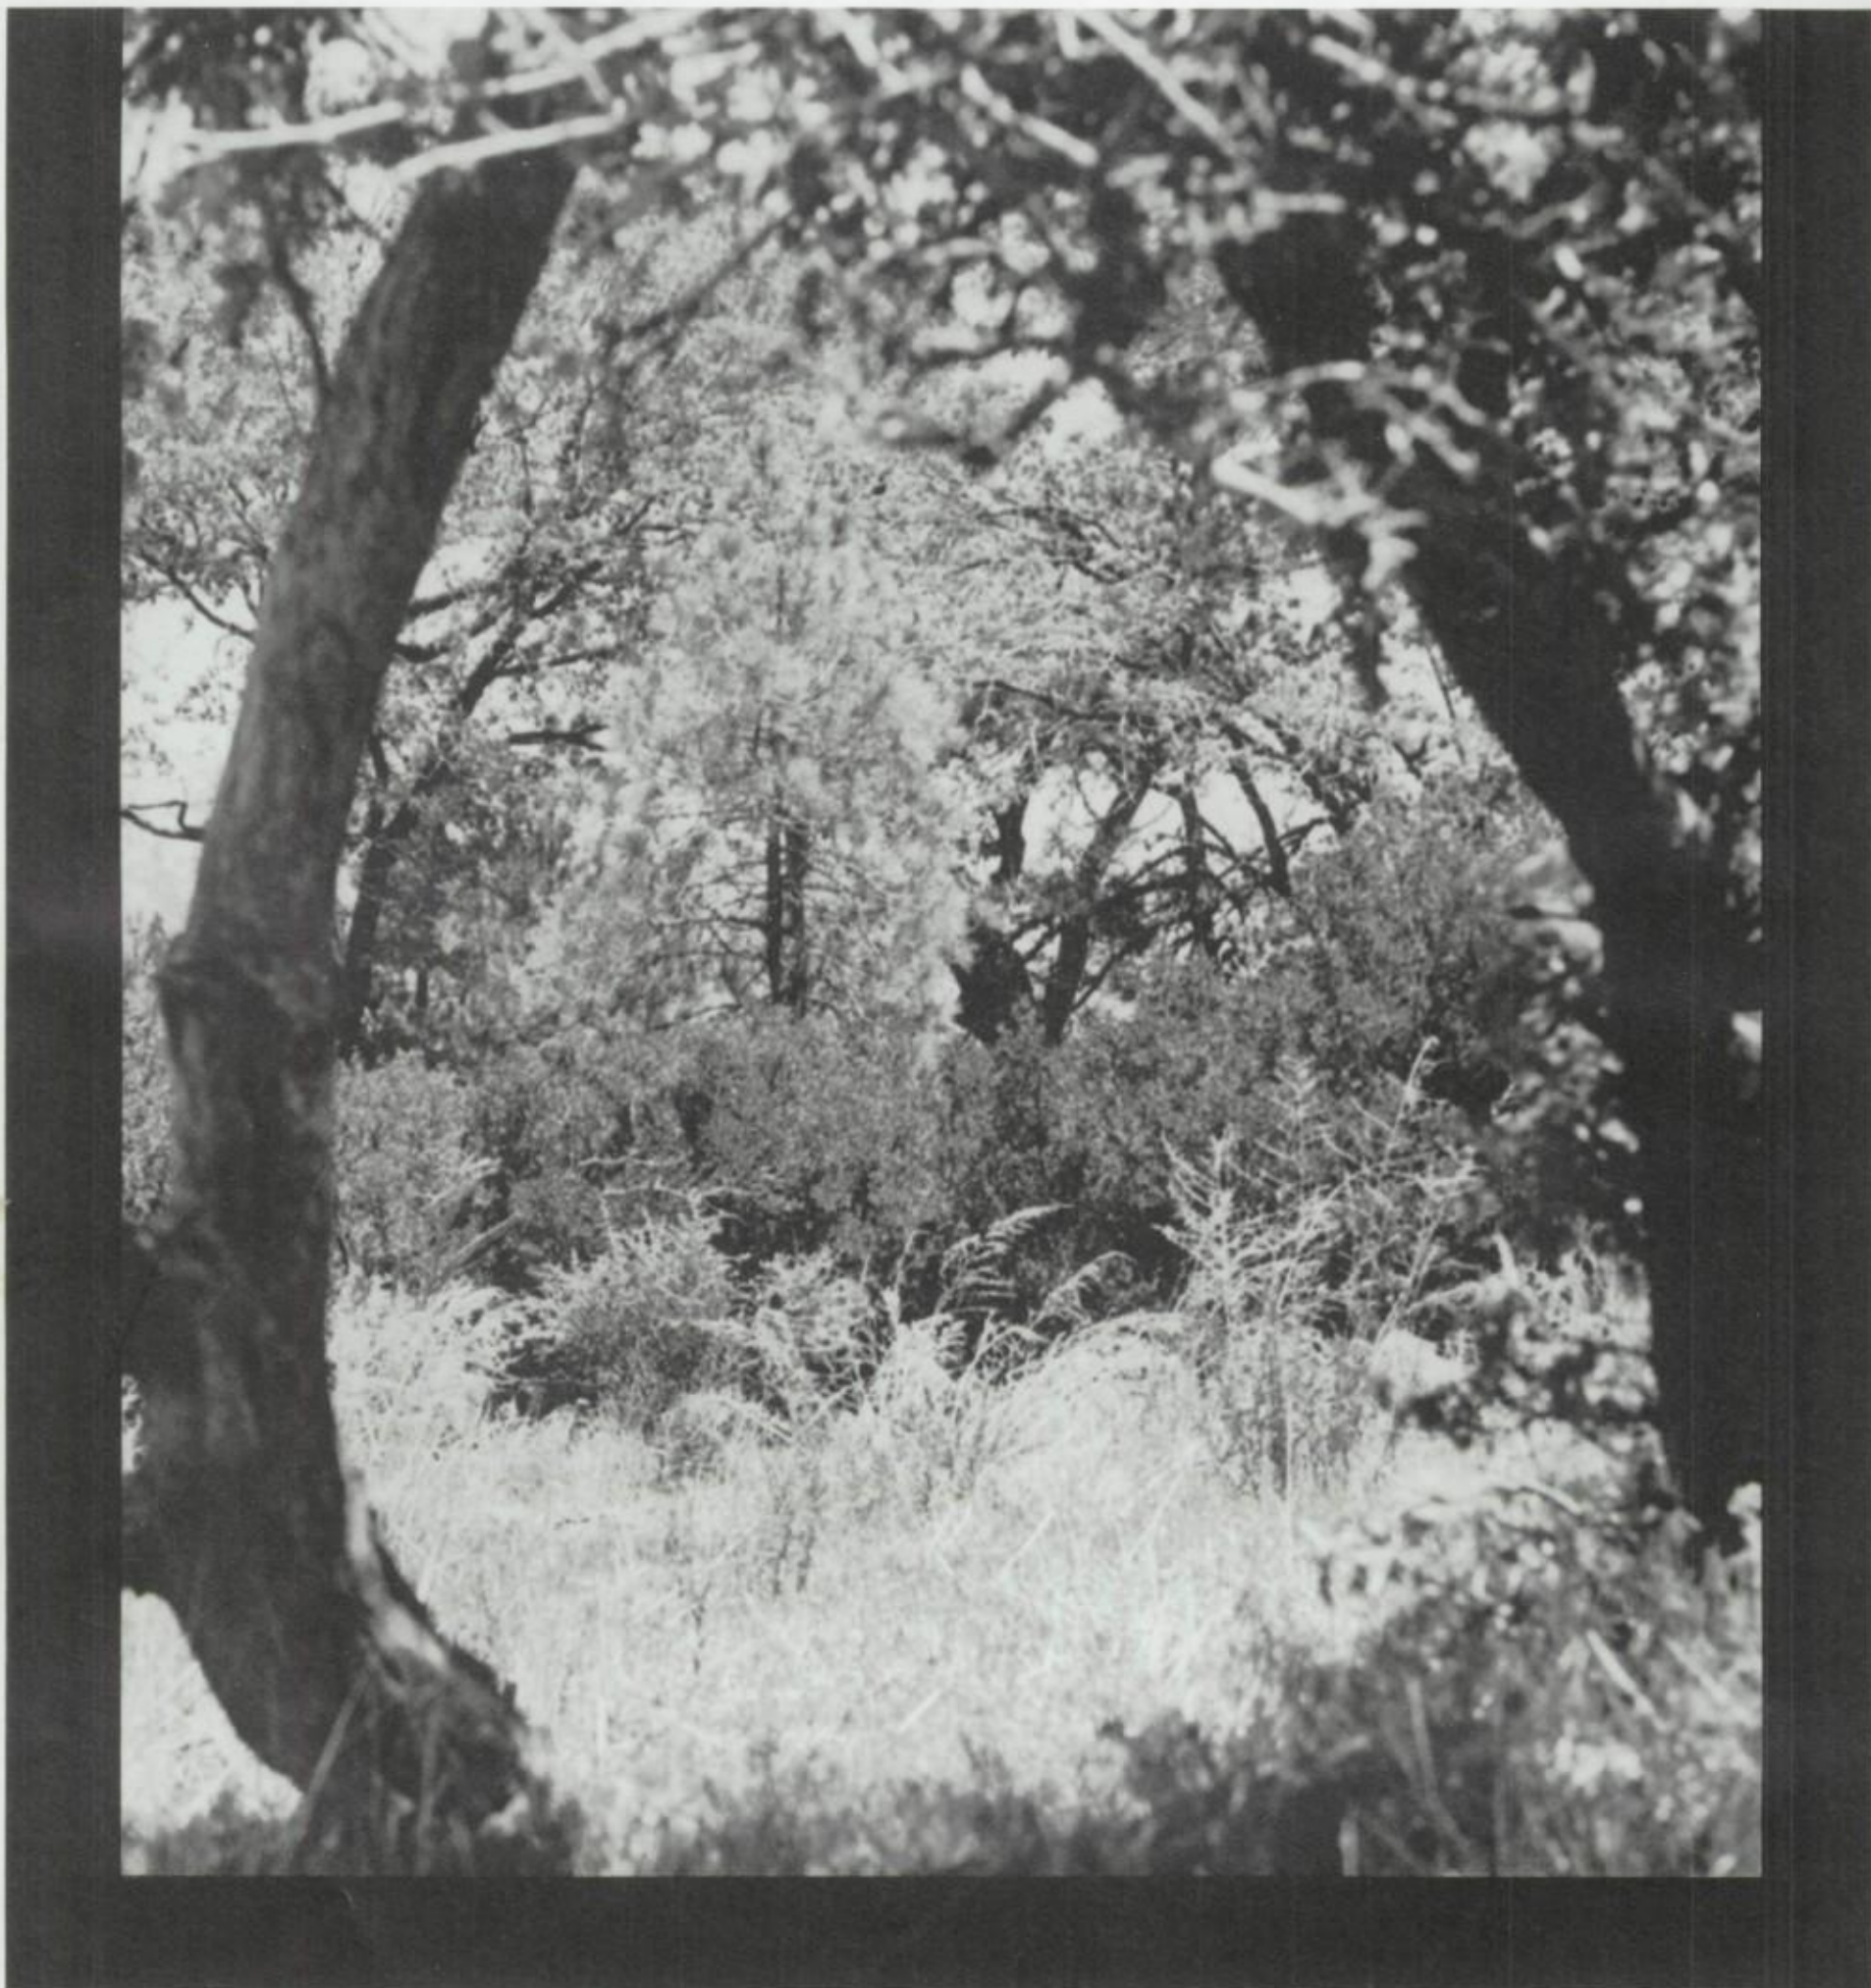

Of a perfect year.

One look at the future,

One thought it now brings,

Why couldn't there be

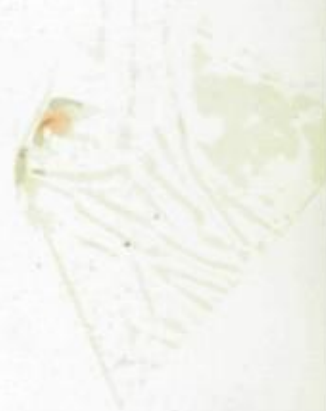

One more bell to ring.

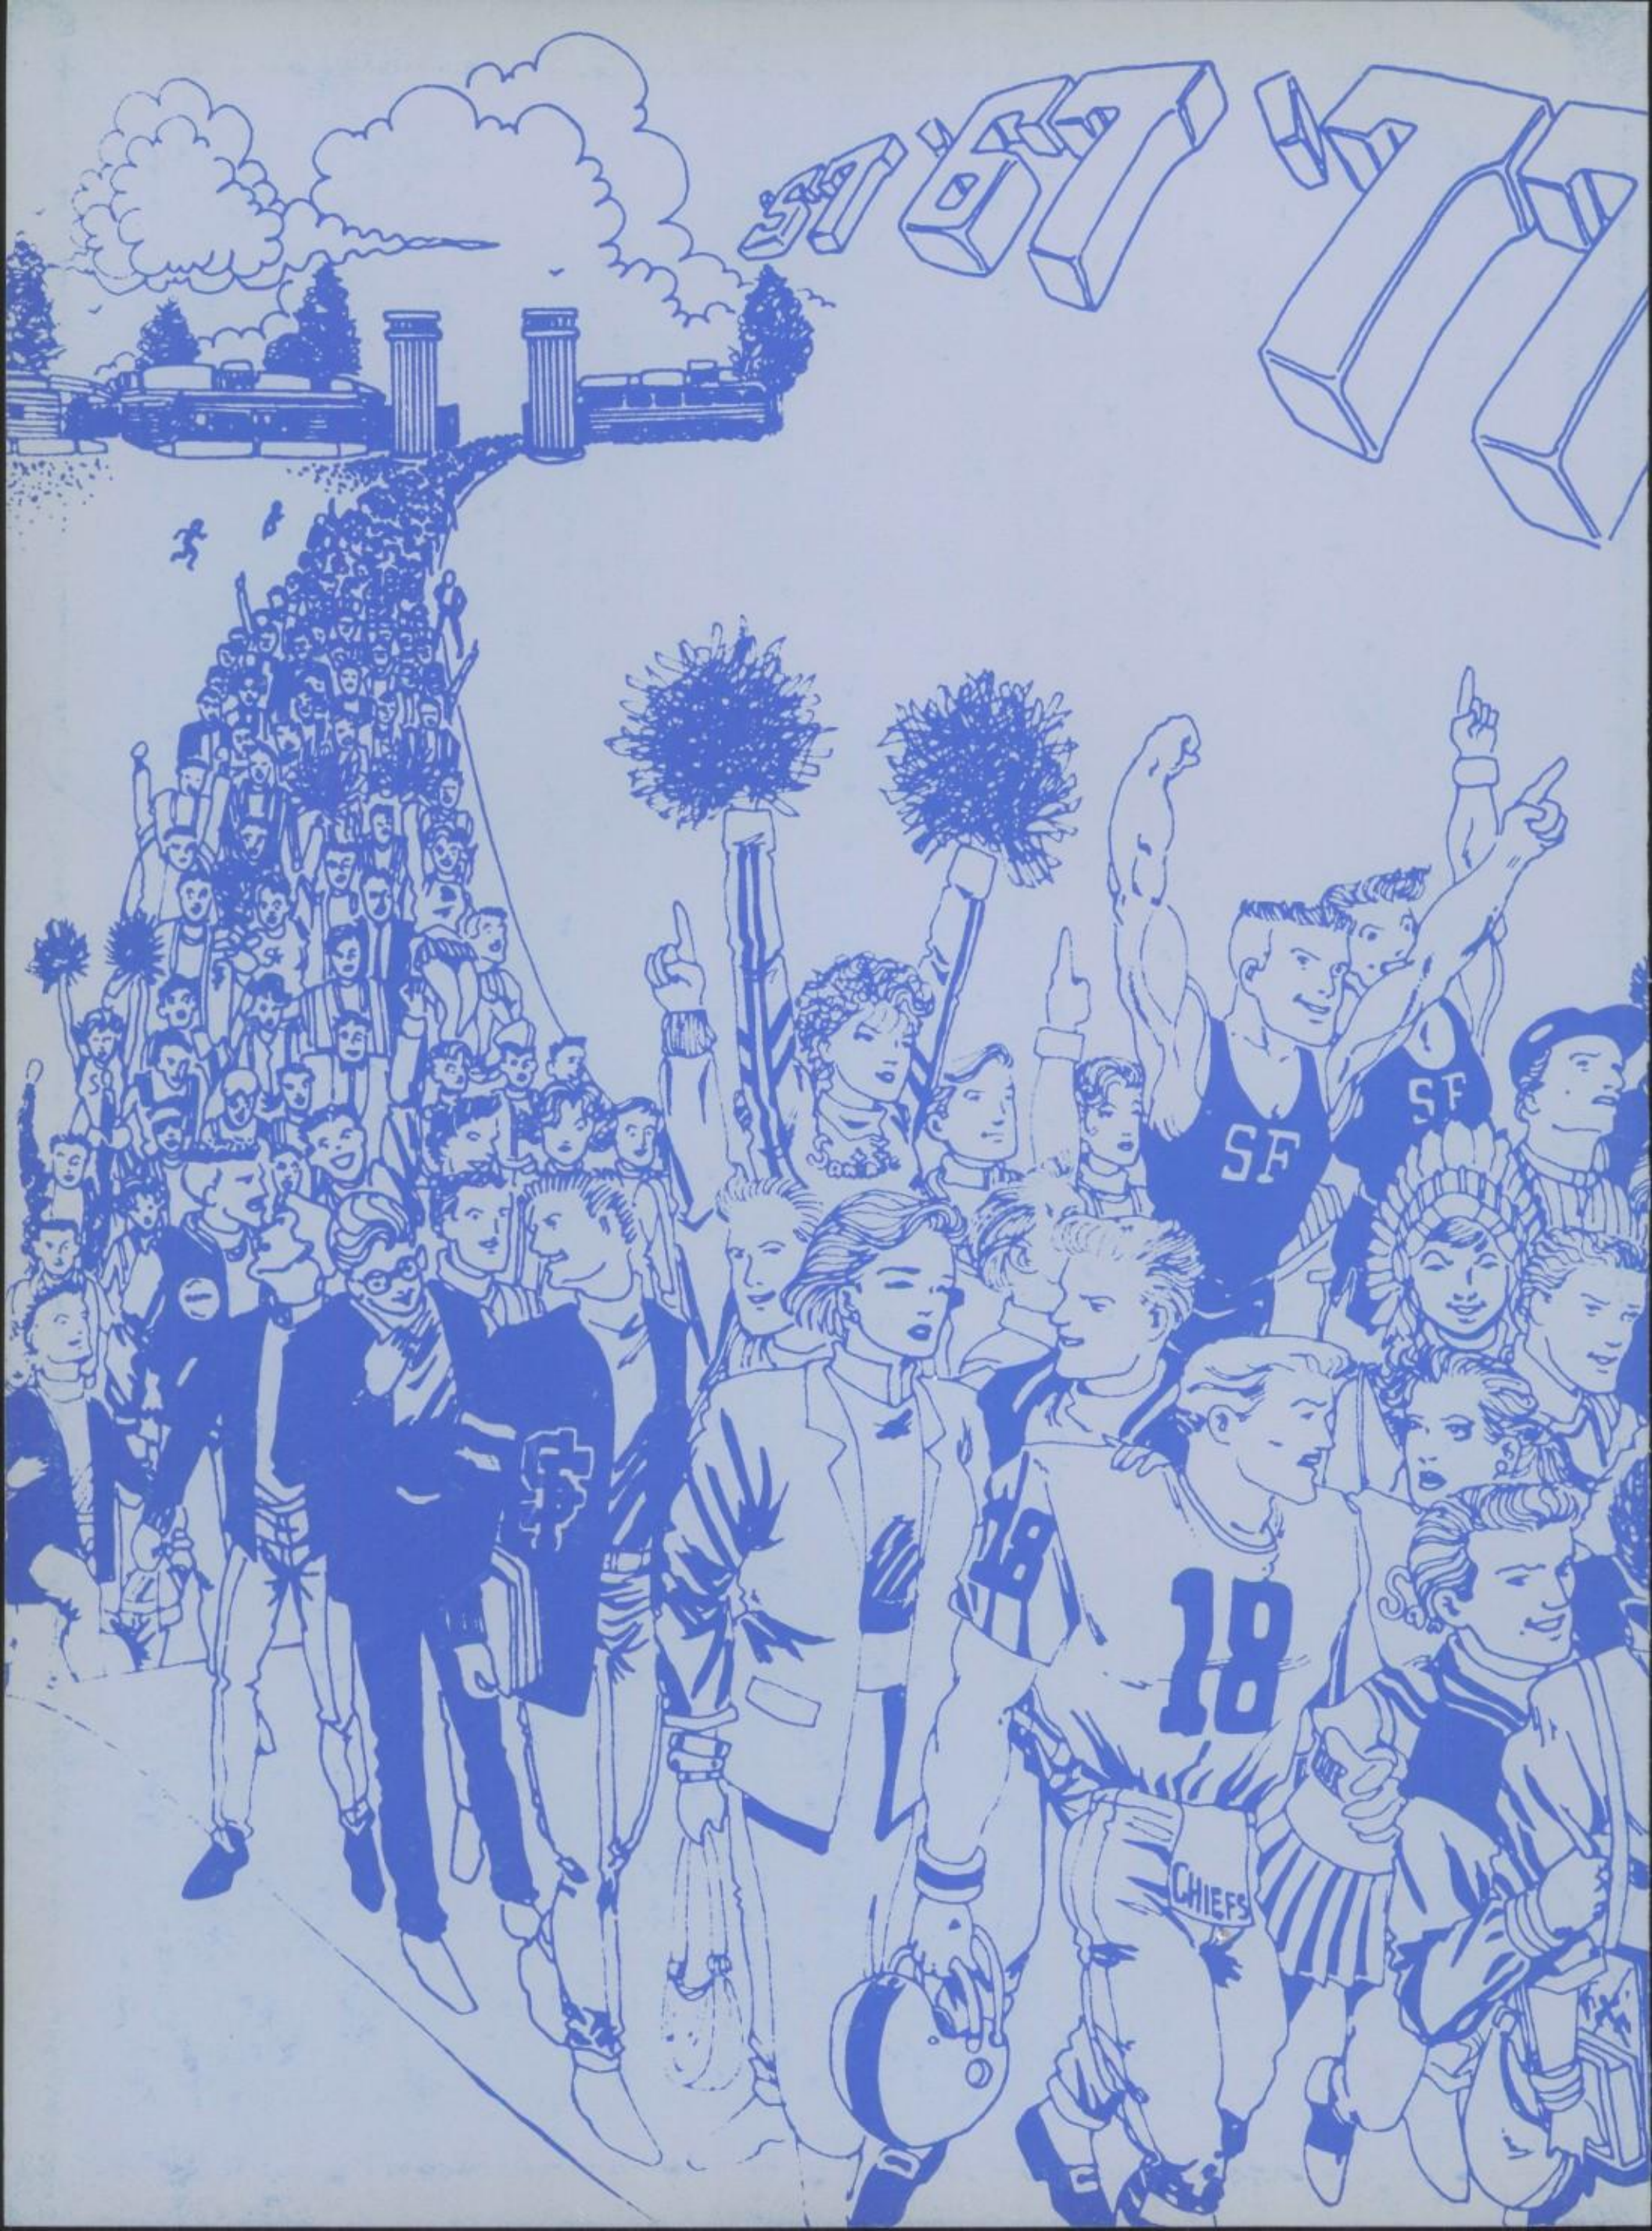

As graduation draws near it would be nice to say that the years were filled with fun and went by smoothly but of course, there were times of difficulty. Together we have laughed, cried and hopefully grown from the experience. Now we need only to reflect on our past and attempt to imagine a brighter future.
